TALKING ABOUT A BRANCH HIGH SCHOOL.

Mr. Dodge called attention to the recommendation of the Commissioners as printed in last evening's STAR, providing for the erection of a high school in Northeast Washington, at a cost of $75,000. He referred to the fact that there was no provision for a site, so he took it, the high school would be erected on the lot adjoining the Wallach School. If this infer-ence was not correct it would take at least $25,000 additional to purchase a suitable site.

He would rather, however, see the high school

APPROVING THE VIEWS OF THE COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. J. T. L. De Land spoke at length on the school question. He thought if Northeast

Washington got a high school it would be a great thing. There is no reason, he said, why, for three or four years at least, one-half of the high school could not be used for schools of lower grades. He thought that a high school at a cost of $75,000 would be more than ample for the needs of the northeast section, and he was of the opinion that the Commissioners had displayed great wisdom in recommending a high school, for they evidently had considered thoroughly the needs of the northeast section. Another point, said Mr. De Land, was that three or four eight-grade schools could be accommodated. Then why not compel the larger children to attend the schools located at a greater distance and allow to their homes? He then referred to the use of the Peabody annex, or, as it is more gener-

Judge Cox Makes an Order in Favor of the Bondholders of 1844.

Judge Cox today heard in the cases of G. S. Brown et al. against the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company (consolidated) the application of the bondholders of 1844 for an order similar to that made by Judge Alvey in the Maryland court to deliver the property to them. order recites that if the trustees under the mortgage of June 5, 1848, shall within thirty days deposit in the Farmers and Merchants' National Bank of Baltimore to the order of the surviving trustees under the mortgage of May 15, 1878, a sum equal to the principal and interest due all the bonds secured on that mortgage, to be paid over to the holders or deposit money or bonds in lieu, as provided for in the decree of the Maryland court (Judge Alvey), and cause to be published notice of the fact and bring into court $20,000 for the payment of costs and expenses, including compensation the receivers, the said trustees (under mortgage dated 1848) shall be subrogated in place of the bondholders of 1878 and to enter into possession of the property and to use and exercise the franchises of the company and by May 1 next at their own cost put in repair said canal and operate it as a public waterway. They are required to pay all current expenses for operating and keeping it in repair; to re-imburse the trustees the amount provided to pay the costs of these proceedings, both here and in the Washington county, Md., court; the expenses and compensation of receivers and of the trustees under the mortgage of 1878. ART NOTES.

Taking advantage of her present engage- How This Industry Has Grown During ment in this city, Rhea, the popular actress, has been sitting during the week for a bust in terra cotta by Mr. Ulric Dunbar, the talented young Washington sculptor, whose work in that line is beginning to attract the attention its merits deserve. Mr. Dunbar has lately made heads in that material of his brother artists Weyl and Uhl that are marvels of artistic spirit, joined to faithful portraiture; and not the least surprising part of the achievement lies in the fact that the two busts last named were each the result of a single sitting only. It is extremely rare that an artist is capable of doing so much in so short a time, but where one possesses that faculty he is doubly fortunate, as the best efforts in art are always secured in the white heat of first inspiration, when the supreme point can be reached without interruption.

- To meet an often expressed desire in that direction, arrangements are now in progress to establish evening classes for drawing in the Corcoran School of Art, and the several rooms will be opened for that purpose as soon as the necessary appliances can be procured and put were no works in existence in this country at in place. Although Mr. Heaton's special work has been portrait and figure painting, it is to be hoped that the grand scenery surrounding his temporary home will so impress him that he may bring back a portfolio of sketches and studies portraying at least a portion of its available material. Most of the scenery there is, however, on such a stupendous scale as to deter the efforts of artists less ambitious than a Bierstadt or a Hill.

- The ninth autumn exhibition of the National Academy of Design commences on Monday, November 24, and closes Saturday, December 20. Pictures will be received at the acadcert of the Washington Musical Club will be emy up to November 1, and the varnishing given at the Universalist Church, 13th and L days will be on Thursday and Friday, Novem-

- Mr. J. Q. A. Ward, who executed the Thomas statue in this city, has received the commission for an equestrian statue of Sheridan, upon which he will at once commence work. Mr. Ward's latest statue is a sitting figure in bronze of Horace Greeley, lately (and unfortunately) placed in the office doorway of the New York

-Among the many new and attractive things to be seen at Fischer's art store is a study-sketch in pastel colors, by Michetti, of a portion of his famous painting "The Procession of Corpus Christi," now owned by the Italian government. Although fragmentary in character, viewed with respect to the artist's purpose in its execution, it is nevertheless an entirely satisfactory composition, including, as it does, the central figure in the procession and appropriate accessories. That it is remarkably vigorous in drawing and strong and rich in color need not be said to those familiar with Michetti's work.

- Max Weyl spent a part of August on the Atlantic side of the eastern shore of Maryland, and the month of September-which is far the pleasantest season of the year for that localityin the more picturesque parts of the Adirondacs. Each field proved strongly attractive, and from both he brought back considerable material to be wrought into finished pictures during the winter. Already he has received orders for two of his Adirondac landscapes, and he is now engaged on a bit of marshy seashore, near Ocean City, that will probably be added to the collection of a gentleman in Boston, to which city it is to be sent when completed. - In a commercial point of view, the art event of the coming winter will doubtless be the sale of Mr. George I. Seney's collection of paintings, which is to take place in New York some time in February. Mr. Seney is a liberal and industrious gatherer of pictures, and as his present collection is said to stand him something like a million dollars, its dispersion will be pretty sure to bring together the principal buyers of the country. This is Mr. Seney's second clearing out of his galleries, the first taking place, -in consequence of financial reverses,—several years ago, and from it the Corcoran Gallery obtained "The Helping Hand," one of the most popular paintings in its collection. What leads Mr. Seney to this step at the present time is not understood, but the financial outcome of the first sale was so successful that the experiment may be tried again from a purely speculative or commercial motive. It may be, however, that it comes from a desire to form a new collection, possibly on a somewhat different basis, which affords an exhilaration both pleasant and profitable to a connoisseur who is able to select wisely and buy to advantage. The sale is to be made by the American Art Association, and a large-paper illustrated catalog, to be sold for forty dollars or thereabouts, is now in course of prepara
